Subject: Rising Exploitation of Children in Urban Society.

Sir/Madam

Through the columns of your esteemed newspaper, I wish to draw the attention of the public and concerned authorities to the growing issue of child exploitation in educated urban societies.

In today's competitive world, many parents, consciously or unconsciously, impose their unfulfilled ambitions on their children. Young children are often pushed into participating in reality shows, television serials and advertisements, depriving them of a normal childhood. Instead of enjoying outdoor activities and holistic development, they are burdened with performance pressure and long working hours.

Furthermore, in academic and extracurricular spheres, children are expected to excel in every field without consideration of their interests or capabilities. This constant pressure leads to severe physical and emotional consequences. Health issues such as obesity, hypertension and stress-related disorders are becoming increasingly common among children. Alarmingly, cases of anxiety, depression, and even self-harm are on the rise.

To address this issue, strict regulations must be implemented regarding the participation of children in media and entertainment industries. Authorities should ensure age-appropriate working conditions and limit exposure. Schools should organise regular counselling sessions for parents to promote awareness about the importance of allowing children to grow naturally and pursue their own interests.

I sincerely hope that this pressing issue receives due attention and that effective measures are taken to safeguard the well-being and rights of children.

Yours truly
Ronita

Subject: Alarming Decline in Handwriting Skills Among Students.

Sir/Madam

Through the columns of your esteemed newspaper, I wish to highlight a matter of growing concern; the steady decline in handwriting skills among students in today's technology-driven era.

With the increasing reliance on digital devices such as laptops, tablets and smartphones, the practice of writing by hand is gradually being neglected. While technology has undoubtedly enhanced learning in many ways, it has also reduced opportunities for students to develop neat, legible and fluent handwriting. As a result, many students struggle with basic writing skills, including proper letter formation, spacing and speed.

This decline is not merely a matter of presentation but has deeper academic and cognitive implications. Studies have shown that handwriting plays a crucial role in improving memory, concentration and comprehension. Poor handwriting often affects students' performance in examinations, as unclear scripts may lead to loss of marks despite adequate knowledge. Moreover, the lack of writing practice can hinder creativity and the ability to organise thoughts effectively.

It is, therefore, essential for educational institutions to strike a balance between digital learning and traditional writing practices. Schools should incorporate regular handwriting exercises, creative writing tasks and note-making activities into the curriculum. Additionally, teachers and parents must work together to instil in students an appreciation for the value of good handwriting as a lifelong skill.

I sincerely hope that educators, parents and policymakers will recognise the seriousness of this issue and take timely measures to preserve and promote handwriting skills among students.

Yours truly
Meera Iyer
